There is convincing evidence that exclusive breastfeeding for a minimum of six months, as well as continuing to breastfeeding after the addition of solid foods, is protective against cancer for both the mother and her child.

The American Institute of Cancer Research has made Breastfeeding one of its Ten Recommendations to Prevent Cancer.

